

2021-2022 Schedule

Cullowhee, Main Campus (Wednesdays, 10am – 12pm)

Asheville, Biltmore Park Site (Thursdays, 10am – 12pm)

January 19 & 20, 2022

John Lane – Attention as activism, activism as attention: Writing the Local

John Lane is professor of English and Environmental Studies at Wofford College. His books include Circling Home, My Paddle to the Sea, and Coyote Settles the South. He also coedited, with Gerald Thurmond, The Woods Stretched for Miles: New Nature Writing from St Sed o W has published several volumes of poetry, essays, and a novel, as well as a selection of his online columns, The Best of the Kudzu Telegraph. Whose Woods These Are is his most recent work.

An investigative procedure, in this case in environmental writing, for assessing literary activity over time.

How do we figure out what our personal project has been over time?

As I move through my 60's personal curation of my "eco-literary project" has become more and more important to me. I would like to present brief selections from my published books ranging from 1970s to the present—poetry, creative nonfiction, and even my two novels—and associate each a creative practice or theme through a single word or phrase.

There will be discussion and interaction about methods you might use to arrange your own creative life work and relationship to nature in such a way.

January 26 & 27, 2022

Mike Gillen – Hunting, conservation and the environment in the Anthropocene: personal observations and dialogue

Mike is retired from a career in law and insurance. He is a year-round resident of Franklin. He has many outdoor interests: hiking, kayaking, photography and birding. He was a volunteer instructor with the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources Advanced Hunter Education program from 1985 until 1991, and goes deer hunting with his son in northern Wisconsin.

February 2, 2022

~~603-449-1000, 4-03-EDUCATION (102-1024) ES~~

Sovereignty

: <https://ebci.com/government/executive/principal-chief/>

Ray Lubitz has been equal parts grateful & thrilled to have been in the food justice & environmental education fields for over 10 years. Rachel holds a B.A. in International Affairs and Cultural Anthropology, and an M.A. in Sustainable Development. Prior to Bounty & Soul,

April 6, 2022

Luncheon at Lake Junaluska

Note to the membership: